Forget Disneyland. For my money, Bossier City's Margaritaville is the happiest place on earth.

From the moment you pull up to free valet parking until the moment you drive off the property, the staff's sole purpose is to make sure you have everything you need. It's been a long time since I've experienced this level of customer service.

Check out Monday's edition for the first of three items on Bossier's sparkly new asset - and a look behind the scenes at staff, management and how they made it all come together for a spectacular grand opening.
