

Needing a good laugh

Written by By CINDY ROLLER, News-Telegram Sports Writer
Friday, 15 January 2010 09:30

After attending a funeral for a close family member, I was needing something to make me smile. So I turned on the television and found the show "How I met your mother." It was the cure to what ailed me.

By the end of the "Girls vs. suits" episode that aired Monday night I was laughing so hard that I was drawing a crowd...check it out too (see video below). For the 100th episode, the writers hit this one out of the park!

Can't beat the comedy of Barney Stinson (or as I remember him, Doogie Howser, MD--I know I am dating myself by saying so), but Neil Patrick Harris has definitely reinvented himself this time! Enjoy.