"We have had some competitive practices and will continue that the rest of the week. We just need to relax and focus our effort, which has been good, to our execution, which has not. Tyler Follis will pitch, with Ben Brooks and others available if needed. We need to get back to having more quality at-bats from each individual, that is getting on base, moving runners into scoring position, and then scoring them when we have the chance. Our pitching and defense has been great so we just need to continue that trend," said Jerrod Hammack, Wildcats head baseball coach.
